Location

Everdon is a small village in Northamptonshire, located to the southwest of the town of Northampton. The village is known for its picturesque rural setting and charming architecture, including traditional stone cottages and the local church, St. Mary's, which dates back to the 13th century.

The site is located between Daventry (4.4 miles) and Northampton (12.1 miles) and is in proximity to good infrastructure links, A45 (3.5 miles), A5 (4.6 miles) and M1 (7 miles).

Northampton rail station provides direct services into Milton Keynes in 16 minutes and into London Euston and Birmingham New Street in 1 hour.

The village is in close proximity to a number of pre-schools and primary schools situated within Daventry and nearby villages, while secondary schools are located in Daventry and Northampton. Daventry is also home to Daventry Hill Special School, educating children with cognitive and learning disabilities from 4 – 18 years old.

In addition, there are several independent schools located in and around Northampton.

The Site

The site currently comprises a detached four bedroom house with garage and private drive from Bethel Lane, situated on a plot extending to approximately 0.16 acres.

Adjoining to the east is a former builder's yard, extending to approximately 0.40 acres, with existing garage/workshop and remaining foundations of a previous workshop building. The yard benefits from a separate access from Bethel Lane to the south.

The existing dwelling provides a significant opportunity for improvement with potential to extend and reconfigure the existing accommodation

The adjoining land provides potential for alternative use or for the development of a number of new dwellings, subject to planning permission, with the benefit of a separate available access.

Planning Policy

The site is included within the Everdon Conservation Area and there are a number of Listed buildings within the village. Any development should therefore be designed to conserve the character and appearance of the traditional buildings within Everdon.
